Judiciary to Hold Judicial Conference on Jury Selection

Chief Justice Stuart Rabner will chair a two-day judicial conference designed to provide the New Jersey Supreme Court with information and recommendations to improve the process of jury selection.

The conference, which was first announced when the Supreme Court released its opinion in State v. Andujar on July 13, will include a series of sessions that examine implicit bias in jury selection, including in the use of peremptory challenges. Another session will focus on the voluntary collection of juror demographic data as referenced in the Court's Aug. 16 opinion in State v. Dancil.

The Judicial Conference on Jury Selection will be held Wednesday, Nov. 10 and Friday, Nov. 12 at the New Jersey Law Center in New Brunswick. The event is open to the public with limited on-site seating and an option to participate virtually.

More information, including relevant case law, articles, and other related materials, is available at njcourts.gov.
