Select Confidential Access Restriction

In most cases, the access restriction will default to “Public”. The restriction can be changed to “Confidential” on the Upload Documents screen. Filers must set the access restriction to “Confidential” first, then attach the document after.

1. Click the checkbox to certify that personal identifiers have been redacted.
2. Under the Access Restriction column, click the arrow to expand the options. Select Confidential.
3. A pop-up will display court rules for excluding records from public access. Click the arrow to expand the court rules under each section.

 in the Case Jacket

Parties with Access

Documents marked as Confidential may only be viewed by internal court staff and any attorneys or self-represented litigants who are directly associated to the case in our system.

When these select users click the paperclip in the case jacket, they can view confidential documents by clicking on the attachment name/link. The case jacket will also indicate that the document is confidential and cite the court rule that was selected during filing.

The blue stamp will also indicate that the document is confidential.
