Re: 2016-2018 SUPREME COURT RULES COMMITTEE REPORTS- PUBLICATION FOR COMMENT – SPECIAL CIVIL PART RULES

Dear Judge Grant:

I respectfully submit this dissenting report to a proposed amendment to Rule 6:7-5, the ability to amend writs to include new filing fees as taxed costs.

As you know, with the inception of the Court Rules under Rule 1:43, the Court increased many court costs and created new court costs that did not exist prior to that date, and as such, there was no need prior to Rule 1:43 under the Court Rules to address subsequent court costs. However, with the acceptance of these new rules, new costs came into being – costs such as motion fees for various motions such as motions turnovers, motions to amend names, motions to amend writs, motions to amend the court records, and costs for notices of appearance and substitutions of attorneys. These costs never existed before. Now because of their existence, writs need to be amended to include these costs as incurred after a writ is issued.

A prime example is a motion for wage garnishment writ of execution. Sometimes a wage execution does not satisfy the judgment because of a prior or insufficient earnings, and thus while that wage execution is still a valid execution and remains pending, other costs may be incurred – costs for motions in aid of litigant’s rights, costs for subsequent writs, motions for turnover, etc. Each of these is a taxable cost that is not on the original writ and needs a mechanism for being added to the original writ.

Another example is a writ of execution. Even though a writ is good for two (2) years, in those two (2) years there may be multiple levies that require multiple motions for turnover. There is no mechanism by which to add costs to that writ of execution.

The recommendation of Mr. Pressler was that since the Clerk is aware of these costs as they are incurred, the Clerk should notify the Court Officer so that he can update the Writ of Execution. In Committee, it was rejected because we were advised that the Presiding Judges were working on this and were coming up with a solution. However, no solution was ever forthcoming.

If this is too much work for Clerks to take on, then I would recommend that Rule 6:7-3(b) and Rule 6:7-4(c) be amended to include the ability to amend writs of execution by certification in the same manner that the same writs are amended to update interest on executions. See attached.

Since this method is already being used to add interest to subsequent writs, it would be a simple amendment to include subsequent costs in these Court Rules. I have attached copies of the proposed rules.

I would recommend that the Supreme Court entertain this amendment to the Court Rules to correct an unintentional consequence and problem caused by adding new costs without adjusting other Court Rules that are affected by them.

Respectfully submitted,

PRESSLER, FELT & WARSHAW, LLP
